

Spel van krachten

In conflict and crises situations not only the soldiers, but aid agencies, politicians, different ministries and media play an important role as well. The "comprehensive approach" takes into consideration this power play in the planning and execution of military operations. The game Go4IT developed by T-Xchange as a training tool won the Defense Innovation Game Award 2009.

In conflict situations there are many interests at stake. All you need is a table, four chairs, a board game and players to get an insight in the dynamics of the playing field. A broad and shared understanding of the situation is the first step towards finding a solution.

The game concept encourages players to build mutual trust and openness towards each other. In addition, it shows the effects of their choices. For example, what is the impact of particular economic goals on safety? What does a certain safety level mean for the administration of the region? Only by keeping each others interests in mind, the players can make progress during the game.
